

SPAIN (USA – Los Angeles)

Album: «Sargent Place» (Glitterhouse Records, release: 28.02.2014)

February 2014 will see the release of Spain's brand new studio album, «Sargent Place». Produced by Gus Seyffert (The Black Keys, Beck, Norah Jones), mixed by Darrell Thorp (Beck, Radiohead, Atoms For Peace, Paul McCartney), and recorded at Gus' home studio (on a street in Echo Park, CA called Sargent Place) the album marks an artistic departure for the band and is arguably their finest work since 1995's «The Blue Moods Of Spain».

Spain was founded in Los Angeles by Josh Haden (son of bass-playing jazz great Charlie Haden). Their debut, «The Blue Moods Of Spain» was released in 1995. The band garnered a devoted cult following and they toured the U.S., Europe, and Australia. They performed on French TV, and opened for Cocteau Twins during their final U.S. tour. Spain's song «Spiritual» was recorded by Johnny Cash on his Grammy-winning, Rick Rubin-produced «Unchained», and by Charlie Haden and Pat Metheny on their Grammy-winning Beyond The Missouri Sky.

Spain's 1999 sophomore CD, «She Haunts My Dreams», found the band headlining large venues across Europe. A song from the album, «Every Time I Try» was picked by Academy Awards winning filmmaker Wim Wenders for the score of his movie «The End of Violence», and the song «Our Love Is Gonna Live Forever» was featured prominently in an episode of the HBO series «Six Feet Under». The third CD, «I Believe», was released in 2001, after which Haden took an extended break from the band.

In November 2013 Glitterhouse released «Spain – The Morning Becomes Eclectic Session», a live studio recording from the world famous KCRW radio station in Santa Monica, CA, which features guest vocal and string appearances from The Haden Triplets (Petra, Tanya, and Rachel). The band celebrated with an extensive European tour.
